About Me

I am a dedicated and goal-oriented Computer Science Engineering student at MIT World Peace University, with a strong interest in software development, digital marketing, and entrepreneurship. I enjoy solving real-world problems through technology and have hands-on experience with building websites, managing social media campaigns, and developing innovative projects. With a blend of technical expertise and business insight, I aim to build solutions that are both functional and impactful. I'm constantly learning, eager to grow, and open to new challenges that enhance my skills and broaden my perspective.
